

Abstract of the Disclosure

A computer network has at least one computer operatively connected to an electronic device. The 5 computer measures the response time for data transfers between the computer and the electronic device. The measured data response times are compared to preselected data response times and an indication is provided if the measured response time exceeds the preselected response 10 time.

10002169-1